Arbors and trellises serve as a support for climbing and sprawling plants and often provide a structural element to a garden, as seen with this beautiful pergola covered with Japanese wisteria at the Biltmore Estate in Ashville, N.C. Climbing roses, perennial vines and annual vines can benefit from an arbor or trellis. Garden vegetables including pole beans, peas, cucumbers and ornamental gourds are often incorporated into a garden landscape in this way.

Cut brush.

When transplanting a seedling, hold it by its leaves, not its stem.

Activity of adult deer ticks is at a peak in late March and early April.
